Ceylon Tea

For centuries, Ceylon tea has been known as the finest tea around the world. Tea was first introduced to Sri Lanka by James Taylor in 1867, and the rest, as they say, is history! Ceylon tea consists primarily of black tea, however green tea and other types of tea are also grown. Although Sri Lanka is a comparatively small country, it has a wide range in elevation, which results in the flavours of tea being produced varying greatly depending on the part of the country they originate from. The main differences in flavour are a result of the climate, soil, sun, precipitation, and plant varieties. Although there are regional nuances, Ceylon tea is classically known for bold, full and brisk flavour. A majority of Ceylon tea is picked by hand, which makes it a brisk and bright tea

Basmati Sella Indian Rice

Basmati is a variety of long, slender-grained aromatic rice which is traditionally grown in the Indian subcontinent, mainly India, and Pakistan, as well as some regions of Sri Lanka and Nepal.

Basmati rice is defined by minimum kernel dimension, an intense aroma, and the texture of the cooked rice, which involves high volume expansion during cooking, a long length of cooked grain, and fluffiness.

Non Alcoholic Malt Beverages

Dark Malt Beverage (also called Malta) is a lightly carbonated malt beverage, brewed from barley, hops, and water. Malta is non-alcoholic, and is consumed in its original carbonated form and tastes sweet. Malta is, unlike beer, not fermented. Malta is also called dark malt, because of its dark brown colour.

ENERGY DRINK

Energy Drink

An energy drink is a type of functional beverage containing stimulant compounds, usually caffeine, which is marketed as providing mental and physical stimulation (marketed as "energy", but distinct from food energy). They may or may not be carbonated and may also contain sugar, other sweeteners, or herbal extracts, among numerous other possible ingredients.

They are a subset of the larger group of energy products, which includes bars and gels, and distinct from sports drinks, which are advertised to enhance sports performance.

Energy drinks have the effects of caffeine and sugar, but there is little or no evidence that the wide variety of other ingredients have any effect.[3] Most effects of energy drinks on cognitive performance, such as increased attention and reaction speed, are primarily due to the presence of caffeine.

Carbonated Drinks

Carbonated beverages include sodas, sparkling waters, and beers. The dissolution of carbon dioxide in a beverage gives rise to effervescence.

With our natural ingredients, you can adapt your product to suit regional taste preferences and those specific to certain target groups. All our natural ingredients are perfectly matched, ensuring harmonious appearances, colours and mouthfeel
